

When arriving by car from abroad to Finland and Helsinki

At the port, you will be directed to a checkpoint where you will be asked for COVID-19 certificates (a certificate of a negative test result, vaccinations, or having contracted COVID-19 previously). Certificates are not required for children born in 2007 or later.

Do I need a negative COVID-19 test result?

You can enter Finland without a negative COVID-19 test result if

- you are a Finnish citizen.
- you are staying or living permanently in Finland.
- you work in the transport and logistics sector.
- your job is essential for security of supply.

To enter Finland on the red line, you must have a certificate of a negative COVID-19 test result (tested within less than 48 hours). You must also have a certificate of a complete vaccination series or a certificate of having contracted COVID-19 within the previous 6 months.

Who must be tested for COVID-19 after 72 ours of entering the country?

If your vaccination series is incomplete, you have tested negative for COVID-19 (tested within the previous 48 hours) or you have entered the country without any certificate, you must be tested between 72 and 120 hours after entering the country. Do not get tested earlier or later than this. Neglecting to get tested is punishable (Communicable Diseases Act, section 87 a).
