

Support for independent living in housing services for the disabled

The social instructor may provide guidance and support in the following matters, for example:

- Financial matters (applications, rent, invoices)
- Matters outside the home (doctor's appointments, handling official matters)
- Adhering to schedules and things that have been agreed upon
- Applying for services
- Work and study issues
- Finding meaningful leisure activities
- Housekeeping and hygiene
- Cooking and shopping
- Guidance of parents in families with children

The service is intended for clients of disability services who live independently and for families with children with disabilities. The service is applied for at the social work office of the client's residential area. The service is temporary and voluntary and requires commitment. The work is planned together with the client and the appointments are recorded in the client information system. The service is free of charge.
